ITEM 7.01 -Regulation FD Disclosure

Casual Male Retail Group, Inc. (the "Company") submits the following update on the performance of the Destination XL stores.

The Company launched its first Destination XL (also called DXL) store in Schaumburg, IL in July 2010. Since then, the Company has opened three additional DXL stores in test markets: Memphis, TN, Houston, TX and Las Vegas, NV.

The Destination XL store format, which is approximately three times the size of a typical Casual Male XL store, features a significantly expanded merchandise assortment from all of the Company's core brands, including Casual Male XL, Rochester Clothing and B&T Factory Direct, as well as expanded assortments of Shoes XL. The expanded assortment is presented based upon our customers' lifestyles in a good, better, best manner. As a result, a DXL store can typically carry approximately 2,000 styles across all brands, whereas our typical Casual Male XL store carries only about 600 styles. The prototype DXL store was professionally designed to have an upscale department store feel, and provide for a one-stop shop for its customers with three important objectives in mind: a) in part to appeal to female shoppers, b) attract the smaller segment of the big and tall market whose waist size ranges from 42" to 46", and c) increase the yearly spend of our existing loyal customers' shopping needs. Furthermore, because the DXL retail channel strategy is to convert higher density existing markets with 1-3 existing Casual Male or Rochester stores to one DXL store, the DXL store is expected to yield a four-wall operating margin of 30% or better due to the lower occupancy and selling expenses in each DXL market.

Although the four DXL stores are currently a test, the Company is very pleased with the stores' performance to date, based on the increased sales from each DXL store compared to what the market generated a year ago from the Casual Male and/or Rochester stores consolidated to the DXL store. In addition, the feedback from the DXL store customers has been overwhelmingly positive. Based on the performance of these four stores thus far, the Company anticipates expanding the testing further in fiscal 2011, by opening an additional 8-12 new DXL stores, increased from the previously discussed 4 to 5 stores. If the Company continues to have success with the DXL stores in fiscal 2011, the long-range plan currently envisions 75-100 DXL store locations by fiscal 2015.

The company currently operates 445 Casual Male XL stores, 17 Rochester Clothing stores and 4 DXL stores. If current long-range plans are met, the Company expects that its total selling square footage chain-wide will not change significantly over the next five years, but its total store count will drop to approximately 350 stores comprised of 250-275 Casual Male XL stores located mostly in smaller cities as a result of closing the Casual Male XL stores in proximity to the approximately 75-100 DXL stores, and an approximate 6 Rochester Clothing stores mostly located in large urban areas. In addition, the Company anticipates that the DXL store concept will contribute in the future to the anticipated earnings growth as a result of the reduced occupancy costs and store operating expenses resulting from the store consolidation.

In the first quarter of fiscal 2011, the Company expects to launch the Destination XL website. The new site will offer its customers the same buying experience which they have in the DXL stores. The site will offer the entire product assortment from all of its core brands, including Living XL, and will have enhancements that the Company expects will make for a more compelling buying experience.
